After taking a view of the European situation the Boston Advertiser feels called upon to ask its readers to note the fine unspoken contrast between the lives of the Queen of England and the Russian Czar. On the day of the coming jubilee Queen Victoria purposes to drive in state through London. Some fear was expressed of danger to her person from the socialist mob. "We fear no violence," said an official of the police, "for every man who meditates mischievous mischief knows that he would be torn to pieces by the crowd if he raised his hand against the Queen." A sovereign who is not intrenched in the hearts of his subjects is always in the midst of guards.— Canadian American.

"OUR EMPRESS QUEEN."

Jubilee year is being heralded in England by loyal songs. The following, written by Clement Scott, with music by Henry Russell, is one of the best so far published:—

Victoria! Queen of a nation That governs the heart of the world!
The Empire of love is the station Where liberty and the sun are the world.
What we would not let us defend thee, Who ruled our lives and our love?
The heart of our nation, we would to thee
The blessings of mothers and wives.

Chorus:—
Victoria! State of our story!
Thou light of the days that have been,
We cheer for the reign and its glory, We pray for our Country and Queen.

Victoria! Hark to our singing, Awake to our jubilee song!
At the foot of thy throne we are flinging The laurels that have been won so long.
The children of Time that surround thee, The cup of thy joy shall be full,
A crown in the hearts we would have thee, As Mother we love thee still, Goddess.

Victoria! Name that a nation Has set its heart on in gold, Look down from the pride of thy station,
For wouldst thou hadst gathered before,
To crown thee with power and treasure,
It is ours as the starkest of stars,
To crown thee with power and treasure,
The words of a people that love thee.

A SHATTERED INTELLECT.

"Help! help! help!"

I started to my feet in a tremor of fright as this cry rang through my room, and gazed at the partition wall which divided my apartment from the room next to it in helpless terror. Then I brought me of the hall, and rushing out there I knocked on the door next to mine.

Silence, followed by a low demoniacal laugh.

"What is the matter?" I called.

"Open the door, if you want help."

A voice evidently that of an aged woman, called out:

"Go away!"

Then I could hear her laugh and mutter to herself, and I went back to my room. On the way I met the boy who was janitor of the building.

"Who has No. 27?"

"Some crazy woman," he answered in disrespectful haste, and was gone before I could ask another question.

A mad woman in the next room?
Surely fate was unkind to me. I had come here to improve my own mind and found myself a-tete with idiocy. I could move out, but I had only just moved in, and such were as scarce as her teeth. I was preparing myself for dramatic readings, and spent the most part of my time in the drill work of the profession, with intervals devoted to the rendering of classical music, consistent with the belief that however hard my poor demented neighbor shrieked and raved in her insane ebullitions, I could draw her out with an opposition bedlam, and I decided to stay where I was and attend to my own affairs.

If I had only done so!

"Mind your own business" is a homely formula, but it is a little classic of reasonable, pertinent advice, which we would do well to engrave on the ritual of our daily lives in letters of gold. So much for parentheticals.

I studied alone. I traveled and ranted to myself. I placed my chamber in a long white gown and laid a tallow candle in my rigid hand, while I strode up and down, repeated in sepulchral tones:

"Ow! I danced up, ow! I say—one-two; why then tis' time to—"
"Save me! save me! help! help! for God's sake, help!"

I dropped my candle, jumped into bed, and drew the bed-clothes over my head. There I lay and shivered until morning.

Then I saw a pale, still woman with a resolute face, coming out of number 27.

"How is your patient?" I asked hurriedly as she passed me on the landing.
The woman stared at me a moment as if she did not quite understand.

"The—insane woman," I explained.

"Oh, yes, much better, but I cannot stop to talk," and she hastened away while I wondered whether she was a nurse to the mysterious woman shut up there, or a relative, possibly a daughter.

I decided on the latter when I overheard the fond language she used toward the poor demented creature.
Never a harsh or reproachful word, but the tender endearments of an affection that was as self-sacrificing as any true strongest filial love can be. And so proud and careful of the unconscious sufferer that no eye was allowed to rest upon her in that wretched state.

I honored and respected such devotion, and soon in my own way I longed to assist the sad and silent woman, who shrank from the advances of strangers, in her labor of love. I began by leaving tiny bunches of flowers at her door.
Then small offerings of fruit, and I had a selfish reward in the silence and peace that followed each occasion. I could hear the patient softly laughing or talking to herself, and I even imagined she had learned to expect the tributes of my sympathy. Who knew? It might even be a small cure, this outpouring of devotion from an unknown source.

Several times I had tried to talk with the daughter—as I had decided her to be—but her manner was so reserved, and so strange, that I began to think she, too, was a real company; that they were, in fact, a mad family. But I had learned that she filled a responsible position during the day, and that her whole life was given up to the cheerless society of the wreck whom she protected with such devotion that I had never perceived a glimpse of her. I felt that to help such a sorrow was a privilege, and I desired no thanks or acknowledgment.

And yet—I will confess it now—it was sometimes hard to bear. The ravings of insanity are never pleasant to listen to, but there was a peculiar weirdness in the muffled cries that rang through the deadening walls.

But there came a climax, as there does to most of the tragedies of life, and it did not come a moment too soon, for I had fallen into a nervous condition that, if I had been a sane lady, would have caused my friends and nearest great apprehension. But I am not a lady, and the few friends I had were too far away to know my condition.

I had become very much worried by the continual strain caused by the vulgar that would yell and jabber incoherent words, my face had grown white and wild looking, my fancies that every next door neighbor would me, as if afraid of me—had the idea too funny?

One evening, just as dusk I went home from a rehearsal for a performance in which I was to appear, and all absorbed in my part, toiled wearily up to my room in the fourth story and walked in without unmaking the door, so unconscious was I of my surroundings.

And the room was lighted and a woman sat there sewing; the furniture was strange—nothing was mine I had made a mistake and walked into No.

27. The woman who sat there alone rose as if ashamed and stepped back.

"I beg your pardon," I said, as I recovered myself, "but it seems I have made a mistake. I was thinking so much of my part that I forgot to knock."

"Won't you sit down? Take this—"
"I'll kill you! Help! help!" shrieked a diabolical voice—the voice that haunted me.

I started in sudden fright; every book and corner was visible to the eye; the bed was there, white and unoccupied; no one was present except me, and I was alone.

"Who is it? What is it?" I gasped, turning pale and sick.

"My parrot," said the woman, calmly, pointing to a gray African parrot sitting sleepily in a cage in the corner.
"I dare say she often amuses you with her noise. She is a very tragic bird. I am very fond of her, but some day you may borrow her, if you like her for company."

"I would like to ring her neck," I said, and went home.

The next time I met the janitor I asked him how he dared to tell me there was a crazy woman in that room.

"A fine woman, a fine woman," he said, with a cynical smile. "It tells her you was crazy with your own self."

"Told her I was crazy?"

"Yes, and she was afraid, too."

Then I saw a mad woman, I had been fooled and outwitted by a lot of a boy, and that Mrs. M. L. Bayne, a golf parrot.—Mrs. M. L. Bayne, in Nile Foundation.

When the inundation approaches the Capital—usually at the end of June or the beginning of July—the Nile (Nubia-dion-Nil) begins their work.

These are the most common of the is to call out, or rather to recite, before the houses of those who wish it, how much the Nile has risen during the past twenty-four hours. The Oriental does not say, "The Nile has risen," but "The Nile has risen," and with much dignity and solemnity, and is never tired of his breath. Even the form of his greeting in the street is a complicated ceremony of words and motions which usually takes some moments to perform.

In the same way this announcement of the river's rise, which seems to us such a simple matter, is a most serious affair.

The day before the river begins his task he goes through the streets accompanied by a boy, whose part it is to act as chorus, and to sing the responses at the proper moment. The cries are:
"God has sent the Nile to the Nile." Response: "Oh day of glad tidings."
"Nubia dion-Nil," the announcement.
Response: "May be followed up success."

Before the river proceeds to give the inundation so much of the Nile, the Nile with the boy a long time, alternating chant, in which he praises God, implores blessings on the Prophet and all believers, and on the master of the house, and on his children. Not until all this has been carefully gone through does he proceed to say the Nile has risen so many inches.

This ceremony is carried on until the month of September, when the Nile has reached its culminating point, and the river, as bringer of such good news, never fails to claim his "bakhshish," sometimes humbly, and sometimes, too, very imperiously.

The reports of these men, who in all Egyptian towns are the ambulant administrators of the state of Nile, are not always reliable. This is partly owing to the fact that the Nile is a very indifferent, they do not take the trouble to acquire exact information at the only reliable source, and also that the Government intentionally spreads false reports of the Nile, in order to excite the people to the advance of the inundation. As the Nile "tax" can not be levied on certain large tracts of land until the rise of the Nile shall have reached at least sixteen Egyptian varis, it does not become a fact that has come within my own experience, that spread false reports, and although the imposition is patent to all, no one dares to raise his voice in remonstrance.

Who's a Hoosier?

A story is told by some of the old residents of the State, to the effect that the word was first applied to Indians about the time when Madison was the center of a large pork trade, and the farmers for a hundred miles around would drive their hogs there in great droves.

The peculiar noise that they kept up in driving the swine—sounded something like hoo! hoo! hoo!—led to their being called, by a corruption of the word, "Hoosiers." The story, if true, would make the origin of the word comparatively recent, and it can not be accepted with credence for the reason that the palmy pork-peddling days of Madison were long after the Hoosiers had become known.

The first that is known of the word appearing in print was in 1830, when John Finley, the Wayne County poet, wrote a New Year's poem for the Journal published at Madison, Wis., in which a description of the pioneer cabin in Indiana is given. The poem, in the first of one of the traditional songs, gives a description of an idea of the manner in which the word came into use. The first few lines read:

I'm told in riding somewhere west A stranger found a "Hoosier's nest," And he said, "A Hoosier's nest," Just big enough to hold a Quaker's nest.
Was on the borders of a prairie,
And, floating he might be imagined, He called the boy who lived in the nest,
The Hoosier, from his home at the nest.

Their explanation of the word is that it was the custom among the early pioneers in Indiana in traveling through the country to call a cabin by calling out, "Who lives there?" and "Who's there?" About the end of the century of the word "Hoosier" was first used.

when the State was very sparsely settled, travel was attended by great dangers, and no man ever rode away from home without his rifle. As a common precaution of safety, when a traveler saw in the distance the smoke from a camp or cabin fire, he would call out, upon coming within hearing distance, "Who's here?" and from the response he would know if he was among friends. From a corruption of this form of salutation the people of Indiana were called Hoosiers. Doubtless settlers, coming back to friends at their old homes, would say that they "were among the Hoosiers," and in a few years the appellation sprang into general use. General W. H. H. Terrell, whose recollections in the early territory of Indiana have been thorough, and who may be accepted as authority, says that this is the true origin of the word, and Governor Wright is credited with saying that it was a corruption of the word of salutation of the early settlers of the Western country. A critical interpretation of Finley's poem seems to give proof of this explanation.—Indianapolis Journal.

FROM SMALL BEGINNINGS.—The minute egg of the coral animal may grow into a monster, and the tiny inferior which ships may sail for days, or even into a densely peopled land, with its railways, cities and busy commerce. Similarly, an idea from some solitary sage of Königsberg, or a Grecian skull, full of imagination, but empty of morals, may, in the course of a few centuries, transform the aspect of the civilized world. The present is a time when scientific conceptions have quite exceptional social potency, and we venture to think that some of those who have attained currency merit more attention than the non-scientific readers than they have received on account of the relations they bear to temporary politics. We believe that many of the errors of even the most extreme school of nihilism are the outcome of one re-condite and mistaken philosophical idea, apparently quite remote from the sphere of politics. This idea may be shortly expressed as the mechanical conception of the universe. But if we are right in believing that this conception is at the root of such political errors, they have also a common origin from a source much less remote. They may be considered, in the first place, as developments of a political error of Jean Jacques Rousseau, whose dreams have had results which now threaten so much of Europe with revolution and anarchy. This main political error is the one that the art of politics is a mere matter of counting heads, one man being absurdly represented to be "as good as another." Hence arises the profound error of regarding a nation as a mere aggregate of similar units, instead of as an organic whole composed of a system of mutually related parts (having very different values and very diverse functions) from the fact of the mere mechanical aggregation of one national or organic whole into a mass of separate, similar atoms is really but one of many examples of that modern tendency to regard a nation as a mere mechanical
branch of knowledge, to the profound detriment of morals and religion.—

NOTICE.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersecretary and endorsed "Tenders for Indian Supplies," will be received at the office up to noon of SATURDAY, 30th April, 1897, for the delivery of Indian Supplies during the fiscal year ending 30th April, 1898, consisting of Flour, Bacon, Groceries, Ammunition, Twine, Oats, Corn, Balls, Agricultural Implements, Tools, etc., duty paid, at various points in Manitoba and the North-West Territories.

Forms of tender containing full particulars relative to the Supplies required, dates of delivery, etc., may be had by applying to the undersecretary, or to the Indian Commissioner at Regina, or to the Indian Office, Winnipeg.

Parties may tender for each description of goods (or for any portion of each description of goods) separately, or for all the goods entitled for in the Schedule, and the Department reserves to itself the right to reject the whole or any part of a tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a Canadian Bank in favor of the Superintendent General of Indian Affairs for at least five per cent. of the amount of the tender which will be forfeited if the party tendering declines to enter into a contract based on such tender when called upon to do so, or if he fails to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

Tenders must make up in the Money columns in the Schedule the total money value of the goods they offer to supply, or their tender will not be entertained.

Each tender must, in addition to the signature of the tenderer, be signed by two witnesses acceptable to the Department, for the proper performance of the contract.

When implements of a particular make are mentioned it is because the articles so described are the most suitable for the purpose of the Government, and the competition between the tenderers must, of course, be in the transportation to the place of delivery.

In all cases where transportation may be only partly by rail, contractors must be prepared to make arrangements for supplies to be forwarded at once from railway stations to their destination in the Government Warehouses at the point of delivery.

Tenders will please note carefully the following conditions:—

1. Supplies will not be paid for until the Department has been assured of the satisfactory delivery of each article for which payment is claimed.

2. No tender for supplies of a description different to that given in the index will be considered, and supplies which are found, on delivery, to be of a kind or quality different to those described, will be rejected by the agents of the Department, and the contractor and his sureties will be held responsible for any loss entailed on the Department through failure to deliver in accordance with the contract.

3. It must be distinctly understood that supplies are to be delivered at various points for the prices named in the tender; that no additional charge for packing or any other expense will be entertained, and that an invoice must accompany each separate delivery of supplies. An invoice for each separate delivery must also be sent to the Department of Indian Affairs at Ottawa, and one to the Indian Commissioner at Regina, if the supplies are for the North-West Territories. When the supplies are for Manitoba the Superintendent of the triplicate invoice should be sent to E.
McGill, Winnipeg.

4. Prices must be given for articles to be delivered at various points of delivery named in the Schedule for each article for which a tender is submitted, and not an average price for each article at all points of delivery; no tender in which a system of averages will be considered.

5. Tenderers should understand that they must bear the cost, not only of sending their supplies to the Department of Indian Affairs but also freight charges incurred in returning such supplies to the tenderer.

6. When supplies are to be delivered "equal to sample," tenderers should understand that the sample is to be seen either at the Department of Indian Affairs, at the office of the Indian Commissioner at Regina, at the office of the tenderer in charge at Winnipeg, or at any one of the undermentioned Indian Agencies.

PROF. TANNER.

Professor Henry Tanner, of London, England, examiner in agriculture under the government department of science, South Kensington, is visiting the Northwest for the seventh time.

The object of the Professor's visit is to establish a new form of colonization for immigrant families under two distinct systems. In the first instance a settlement is to be established in the immediate vicinity of Qu'Appelle, whereby a number of immigrant families may be accommodated upon blocks of 40 acres of land each with cottage suitable for the conveniences and decencies of life, having four rooms. In addition to this, four acres of land will be prepared and sowed in advance of their arrival, so that when they reach their future homes they will not only find a convenient and comfortable house awaiting them but also crops of wheat, barley, potatoes and other necessities, so far advanced as to simply want gathering for use. By this means they would be provided with 12 months supply of vegetable food. It is also intended that the immigrant families shall have a cow, pigs and poultry, either by their own means or have them provided for them. The primary objects aimed at are not only placing immigrant families in the Northwest under such conditions as to provide for their comfort, but to place them in neighborhoods where they can find steady employment and besides this to secure them schools, Sunday services and medical attendance. The second plan which the professor is about to carry out differs but slightly from others under the Dominion Lands Act. The only variation appears to be that before the immigrant families leave England their applications are made for quarter sections in accordance with the requirement of the Dominion Lands Act and these quarter sections are secured to them on the Government terms. The details of this plan involve 16 immigrant families being grouped in four free homestead sections contiguous to each other, and in order to make their conditions of settlement the more favorable, the central section which lies between the above mentioned four sections homestead land is bought from the owners, whether railway companies or others, and at the center of this central section a new settlement is established. The advantage claimed by purchasing this land is that the owner can deal with greater freedom, and hence more advantageously to the settler than if they had to deal with homestead land, for which no patent could be obtained for a period of three years. Briefly speaking, the objects aimed at in these new settlements by Prof. Tanner are, first, the comfort and well-being of immigrant families, such being a necessary precedent to their ultimate success and comfort in life; and this is supplemented by arrangements, whereby necessities are provided in the form of schools, church service and medical care.

The professor states that he has had exceptional opportunities to judge of the character of the immigrant families which now leave England for the Northwest; and he says that not only the number, but quality, exceeds and is superior to any previous year, and a large number have had agricultural experience.

Prof. Tanner is arranging for the immediate erection of a number of the cottages referred to above on section 30, 18, 13. The professor will also locate at once another section south of here on the same plan. He is accompanied by Mr. E. H. Hill, of London, England, who is about to have extensive buildings erected on section 36, 18, 14.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH.

The annual Easter vestry of this church was held on Monday last, the Rev. W. E. Brown the newly appointed incumbent in the chair.

The church warden presented their report for the year past, which stated that the congregation had been gradually increasing and that the offerings had been sufficient to meet all current expenses and leave a considerable surplus which had been applied from time to time towards the payment of the Incumbent's stipend. The report also congratulated the vestry on the final completion of the church by the addition of a chancel which was built at the sole cost and expense of a lady in England, the munificence of whose gift and kindly interest in us through her relationship with the Bishop of the Diocese, deserves more than a mere passing notice in the report. The report urged upon the vestry the necessity for a special effort to augment the present subscriptions to the Incumbent's stipend. The report further acknowledged the service of several people given voluntarily, which greatly decreased the payment which would have to have been made in carrying out the services of the church. The balance sheet annexed to the report showed:

Amount of receipts from all sources,	$569.32
Total disbursements,	$370.20

Cash on hand on general assets, and Incumbent's stipend, $199.12

The account having been audited by Messrs. Strong and Jagger on the motion of Mr. Little seconded by Mr. Charlesworth the same was adopted. In putting the motion to the vestry the Incumbent said he was glad to state that there had been an increase of 21 communicants since last Easter. Mr. Milliken for the fifth time accepted the office of vicar of the church warden.

On motion of Mr. Jagger seconded by Mr. Strong, Mr. Leslie Gordon was re-elected peoples' warden.

The following were then elected vestrymen: Messrs. Skinner, Jagger, Milne, Mackay, Strong, Osler and Redpath (clerk).

The sum of $10 each was voted to Mr. Edwards for his service as organist; Mr. Duffon for his service as sacristan; and to Mr. Jagger to purchase music books for the use of the choir.

Messrs. Milliken and Redpath were instructed to take immediate steps to have the windows stained and grained to prevent the unpleasant glare at present experienced.

Moved by Mr. Strong seconded by Mr. Jagger that the report be sent to THE PROGRESS for publication. Carried.

Vote of thanks was passed to the church warden.

The vestry then became a special meeting to elect two lay members to the Diocesan synod, when Mr. Leslie Gordon was re-elected and Mr. Redpath elected in the place of Mr. A. King resigned.

—When the proposed N. W. C. convention will eventuate?

—How many more miserable ninepenny worse confounded candidates there will be?
